

Don't let lobbyists decide what we can and can't listen to. Before I tried XM I thought it was stupid to pay for something you can get for free. But after trying XM I understand that I get much better programming than you can get with free radio. If I am willing to pay for a service, no one should be able to limit the service they can provide. The NBA's members should try to make their service better, not limit the service XM can provide. Instead of being afraid of XM, they should use this opportunity to try new ideas and move forward, not make innovative people move back.
